The Drinking Water

Our drinking water is ground water originating from 30-40 m deep wells located in the Jyllinge area. The temperature at the wells is always below 10 degC (50 degF). The hardness of the water is 10°dH (medium hard). The water is clean and safe to drink (The quality of the water is tested regularly).

While our dogs sometimes drink the water in the fjord I do not recommend it. The water in the fjord is clean but somewhat salty (half the salinity of that found in the open sea :-)

House Rules

You can borrow extra tableware whenever you want.

You can borrow two bikes in the wooden shelter at the roundabout (or in the barn)

Please, no shoes inside the apartment

In Denmark it is normal to take your shoes off and to walk around in the house on your socks.

We have underfloor heating so you won't feel cold during the heating season.

Please, no smoking inside

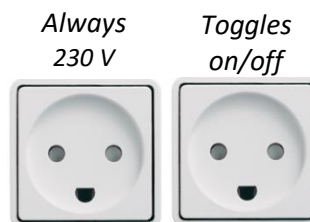

Please, no pets

¹ The European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) entitles you to free emergency treatment at a public hospital in Denmark. Consultations with a doctor or dentist are covered for holders of an EHIC card. The doctor or dentist must be registered with the public health service. If any fees are paid to a doctor, they will be reimbursed. Dental costs are partially reimbursed.

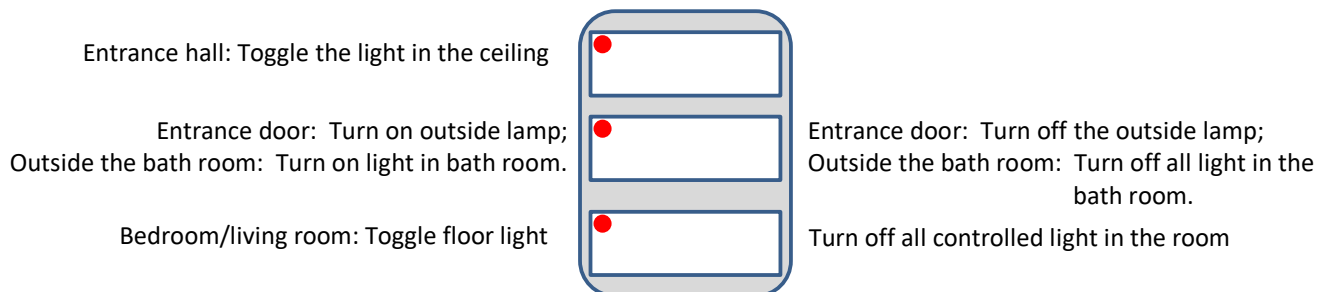

The Electrical System

The right outlet is controlled by toggling the lower left button of any of the small controllers placed on the wall in that room (see below).

Heating

June 7th 2023 we shifted from gas heating to geothermal energy.

Now, 1/3.5-1/5.5 of the energy comes from electricity and the remainder from the 600m tubes laid in the lawn – most of which is at 1 m depth in an area of 1,500 m² near the fjord.

The hot water in our house has been set to ECO+ which results in temperatures of the hot water of 40-45 degC.

On request it can be raised for 1-2 hours duration.

Apartment Layout

Short on Sildehøjgård

The farmhouse is called Sildehøjgård (in English: Herring Hill Farm). The photos above were taken early 1993.

The buildings were moved around 1818 to the present place from their original location in the northern part of Jyllinge.

Sildehøjgård is named after the nearby hill Sildehøj (Silde Höye or Herring Hill) lying 300 m east of the property. Sildehøj is a burial mound from the Early Bronze Age (1700 to 1100 BC).

The reef Sildehøjrevet stretches 400 m from the shore to Silderenden (Herring's Trench) in the middle of the fjord and then turning north-west and parallel to the island Eskilsø. The reef is visible when the water level in the fjord is low. The trench was used by the Vikings and until the 13th century where it was the main sailing route between Roskilde and the open sea.

Walking Along the Coastline

The coastline around Denmark is 8.750 km. You are allowed to walk along any Danish coastline outside of towns and cities, whether public or private. You may settle down for a short while or enjoy a swim, provided you are at least 50 m from buildings.

The beach is in this context the area between the sea and where contiguous vegetation begins (the meadow where we live). Along our part of the fjord there is a walking path in the meadows that you are most welcome to use.

Please note, there are restrictions applicable to access to the islands in the fjord. They are all part of Roskilde Fjord's bird sanctuary. During the breeding season from April 1st to July 15th it is prohibited to enter any of the islands. Furthermore, no traffic (e.g. kayaking/rowing/sailing) is allowed within a 50-meter zone around all the small islets and neither along the south-eastern part of the island Eskilsø.

Getting Around

Rowing/Kayaking

To protect nesting birds, it is prohibited to enter any of the small islands in the inlet Roskilde Fjord in the breeding season from April 1 to July 15. This includes traffic (e.g. kayaking/rowing/sailing) within a 50-meter zone around all the small islets in the fjord (Jyllinge Holme) and the south-eastern part of the island Eskilsø.

Walking Tour to the Old Village (1 hour walk)

- 6.) Old village and fishery harbor

Sildehøjgård originated in northern part of the old village.
 Moved to the present location around 1818.

Jyllinge old village – the oldest houses are 300 years old – the church is close to 900 years old.
 The dotted line is roughly where a stone fence surrounded the village – parts of which still exist.

Silderenden (Herring's Trench)

Used by the Vikings and until 13th century as the sailing route to Roskilde. Popular is fishing sea trout and during May-June garfish. Also gobies, herring, flounder, cod, eel, eelpout, pike and abbor. There can be strong current through Silderenden on windy days. Silderenden is 2-4 m deep in its northern end!
NOTE: Remember to acquire a fishing license if you want to fish.

Sildehøjrevet (Herring Hill reef) is a shoal covered by small flint and granite stones. It stretches from our beach, 400 m from the coastline, and along Silderenden. It is dry whenever the water level in the fjord is low due to longer periods with strong easterly or southern winds.

Sildehøjgård (Herring Hill's Farm)

Sildehøj (Herring Hill) - 3,500 year old burial mound.

Eskilsø the largest island in Roskilde Fjord - 1.3 km². 800 m from our property. 2.5 km from north to south.

Ruin of medieval monastery (Æbelholt Abbey) from 12th century located on the highest point of the island.

Roskilde Fjord Shallow water - depth 0.3-0.4 m - from the beach to 150 m from the shore. Then the water depth quickly drops to 2-3 m. The bottom is medium coarse sand with few stones.

Low salinity (around 1.3 %).

Walking Tour Along the Fjord (25 min. or 1 hour walk)

— A to B: 1 hour walk (4.3 km) along the shore to Oddestenen.
 Shortcut (2.2 km) by skipping the path to a large boulder named (10) Oddestenen.

Roskilde Fjord is an EU bird sanctuary. Some 4-5,000 birds across 25-30 waterfowl species breed on the small islets during the breeding season March-mid July. This includes muter swan (knopsvane), mallard (gråand) and shelduck (gravand) but is dominated by colonies of gulls terns. Occasionally, you may see gray heron (fiskehejre), white-tailed eagle (havørne) and marsh harrier (rørhøg).

The sanctuary attracts 30-60,000 roosting and foraging birds outside the breeding season. During some winters even more.

From late July to late March watch large flocks of migrating Greylag geese (grågæs (Anser anser) | Graugans | Oie cendrée) flying near or over our house, or foraging the surrounding fields. Sometimes flocks of several hundred can be seen!

Late September flocks of buzzards (musvåge) and other birds of prey migrate south crossing the fjord at Eskilsø and Jyllinge holme.

From September to March there are large flocks of overwintering swans and ducks, e.g.:

- Blishøne (Fulica atra)
Coot | Wasserhuhn | Foulque.
- Troldand (Aythya fuligula)
Tufted duck | Reiherente | Fuligule morillon
- Hvinand (Bucephala clangula)
Goldeneye | Schellente | Garrot à oeil d'or
- Stor Skallesluger (Mergus merganser)
Goosander | Gänsesäger | Harle bièvre

9.) Sildehøj (Herring Hill) - burial mound from the Early Bronze Age (1,700-1,100 BC).

10.) Oddestenen - a large boulder.
 Glacial erratic likely from central Sweden.
 Circumference 12 m (36 ft.)
 Estimated weight 70-80 tons.

21 km trip on bike with prehistoric monuments, church frescoes, old bridge, and bird paradise.

Prehistoric Monuments in Our Vicinity (within a radius of 8 km)

5,000 years ago the water level in Roskilde Fjord was 4 m higher! Today the land rises at a rate of 1.5 mm/yr.

Polished flint axe from early Neolithic (3,000 to 2,500 BC)

Gundsømagle Sø is a bird-rich lake area of 300 hectares (750 acres) – 60 of which are owned by Fugleværnsfonden.

Visitor Access: 2 parking lots. 800 m long trail along the southern shore and two bird watch towers. 300 m long footbridge in the reed beds west of the western bird tower. The reed beds are the largest in Eastern Denmark.

Breedings Birds

In the reeds and the scrubs are breeding bitterns, water rails, nightingale, sedge warbler, reed warbler, marsh warbler and reed bunting. Bearded tit is another bird species that can be experienced - especially if you use the footbridge that goes into the reed bed. Marsh harriers can be seen drifting the reeds from April to October.

Crested grebes, mute swans, greylag geese, mallards and coots nest at the lake.

Migrating and Roosting Birds

All year round you can see cormorants and herons foraging in the area. Buzzard and pheasant are regular guests. In early autumn you may be lucky enough to see osprey over the lake. In winter, large flocks of tufted ducks out on the lake are resting during daytime. At night they fly out of Roskilde Fjord to forage. Pochard and goldeneye is also seen on the lake. Mallard, gadwall and widgeon are regular guests from August to April. Goosander and smew are seen regularly off the eastern bird tower. Whooper swans and graylag geese use the lake much to roosting. Both the hen harrier and legged buzzard can be seen across the meadows and reed beds. In recent years, hen harrier has begun to spend the night in the reed beds around the west tower, where up to 10 birds have been observed.

Roskilde Fjord

Roskilde Fjord is an EU Special Protection Area and an EU Habitat Area.

It is one of the most beautiful and interesting fjord landscapes in Denmark. This narrow inlet (fjord) cuts its way almost 40 km into Zealand, and is generally rather shallow, with a depth of less than 6 m in most places.

There are approximately 30 small islands in the inlet, with a largely untouched flora and fauna. To preserve these, human influence is kept at as low a level as possible.
